

5-1-2015

Shot Away

Quincy Scott Jones

Sarah Lawrence College, qjones1@gm.sl.c.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.sl.c.edu/writing_etd

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Jones, Quincy Scott, "Shot Away" (2015). Writing Theses. Paper 26.

This Thesis - Open Access is brought to you for free and open access by the Writing Graduate Program at Sarah Lawrence College Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Writing Theses by an authorized administrator of Sarah Lawrence College Digital Commons. For more information, please contact alester@sarahlawrence.edu.

shot away

Quincy Scott Jones

Submitted in partial completion of the Master of Fine Arts Degree at Sarah Lawrence College
May 2015

Table of Contents

Advice from the Statue on my Mother’s Bookshelf.....	3
Bullet Catch.....	4
Her Name was Renisha McBride.....	5
Trayvon Triptych.....	7
How to Build a Prison.....	10
night song (summer).....	13
Music Appreciation.....	14
How to Dance During a Riot.....	17
What a Demon Looks Like in Ferguson, Missouri.....	19
Kids will be ?	20
This is How You Choke ‘em	21
Halloween Poem (2014)	22
night song (fall)	23
The Talk	24
“post-racial” as Samuel L Jackson.....	26
Every time you write about Marissa Alexander.....	28
This poem would like to start with “Thank you.”.....	30
night song (winter).....	32
Rhetoric.....	33
How to be Black in an Airport with your Indian Wife	37
How to Light Your Own Poem on Fire.....	39
Instructions to the Child I Won’t Have	40

Advice from the Statue on my Mother's Bookshelf

Best keep your head down Best do more studying and less studying of me Yes my right arm becomes the horse's bridle and my left becomes the tail I am both mount and rider goddess and beast
just like everyone else.
Best race ahead of everyone else. Best stop considering whether I was carved on the sands of Senegal or shipped from an off-shore American assembly line.
I'm doing fine. How's that history book?
Best read it like it's your story.
Now it is.
Best not think I'm a keepsake bought for $48 at whatever exchange rate wrapped in an old scarf to keep safe by an ex-boyfriend before he knew he was an ex. Best keep to the text:
How the spice roads were all closed
And the mess the Moors made of Spain.
Don't even try to explain slavery or Manifest Destiny
or 1807 men and women bound and sold at whatever exchange rate for horses and gold who at St. George d'Elmina, the Gate Of No Return,
would cup their hands
and swallow sand
until their stomachs burned
so they could always carry the motherland.
They're the least of your concerns.
Best buy what the schools selling you.
And best keep your head down cause one look up – just one more look up – and I'll bring this book shelf down upon you.
Turn my rope arms to whips, make a man of letters out of you.
Raise the scars of your skin into lines of an epic.
Have your teachers read your body like brail.

Bullet Catch

for Jesus Huerta, Chavis Carter, Victor White III & counting¹

Step right up! Step right up! Ladies and Gentlemen! Boys and Girls!
Feast your eyes on the brown-tan-black man-boy and the wonder of a lifetime!

Come see the patrol car. Come see the back seat. Come see the folded boy the folded body, the hands folded behind the back. Come see the boy patted down for weapons.
Come feel for weapons. Feel arms that can't move. Feel the chest: nothing but breath.
Feel the groin: nothing but meat. Feel legs that can't run, even check the teeth.
Check the cuffs: taunt, tight, metal chewing into the writs.

Check the numbers: .45 caliber, .38 caliber, 22, 21, 17-years-old.

Watch the patrol door open. Watch the boy get jammed in. Watch the hands. Watch the head. Watch the body fold. The handcuffs hold. Watch the chains chew the wrist.

Watch the boy catch the bullet in his teeth. in his jaw. through his eye. in his skull.

You'll never see the gun blast. You'll never see the pistol pulled.
You'll never see the bullet switch or the last phone called made.

Step right up. Step right up. Step out of your house. Step onto the street. Step out of the car, put your hands up, hold your hands out, place them behind your back. You have a right to be shocked into silence. You have a right to tell everyone; they won't believe a thing.

5

The hands are empty

4

The chain is taunt

3

The chamber's loaded

2

The hammer's cocked

1

Want to see it again?

Her Name was Renisha McBride²
in response to the editor of Re-News It, a blog dedicated to "Rewinding the Rhetoric" seemingly by criticizing black people who died tragically

1.

Heard you had a fight with your parents Heard you stormed out the front door vowing never to speak to them again

Heard you had a little to drink that day smoked a little weed listened to a little hip-hop

Heard you liked the ladies liked ladies that were with other ladies like the hip-hop song goes Your chick chose me

Heard you took the wrong turn missed the stop sign hit the other lady's car

Heard you knocked on his door

2.

Heard his 911 call
I have a woman here and she's been in acci-
-No
There's someone outside trying to break-
-No
"I just shot someone on my front porch."
Yeah that's the one

Maybe he didn't hear you say "help"?
Maybe you didn't say it right?
Needed to enunciate extend your vowels end in a question a tilted neck a tennis skirt and a twirl of your blonde hair:
Yeah that's how it's done

Maybe he didn't hear you through the rain

3.

Was it raining?

Was it soaking through the clothes?

beating down on you like black skin?

Leaving streaks in your eyes

like women left bleeding on the curb?

Did it curse you? Crush you?

Keep you captive like a photograph

with your hat on backwards

and the words in the caption misspelled

for every concerned blogger

or cable channel reporter

to shine it like a porch light saying

This is why we can kill you and this is why we can kill you again?

Trayvon Triptych

I. George Zimmer Presses the Mute Button

They say I was angry
The same country that promotes drunks and pot heads to President

The same eleven o'clock news that shows sobering views of Trayvon in his hoodie

next to sketches of the same height weight race under the crawl of "Still at Large"
They talk about the bar fights

remind me of domestic charges and police exams
So what if I am angry?
Or thought I was

cause I never saw anger till I saw that kid's fists and I don't know how you get so much at so young but he could have punched a sink hole the size of Florida with enough chains he could have dragged the entire nation into the sea

II. Conversion of a Bullet

I weigh the same as seven Skittles
a hundredth of an Arizona tall ice tea
In a fraction of a second

I am faster than cable news commentary can outrun any child's cry but most of my life is spent confined in a chamber jammed metal to metal with my brothers shivering in the same nightmare

Will it hurt when the hammer falls?
What happens when the trigger's released?
Imagine my relief after the fire

when I felt the warmth of human flesh nestled in the boy's chest found rest in a ready-made womb

What should I care whose life I devour?
In the flash I was greater than God

III. The Phone Call Trayvon Never Made

Hello? Police?
There's a white man following me and I think he's got a gun trying to do me like Malcolm like Medgar Evers in my own driveway Drive me away like Assata Shakur

I think she's Tupac's mom Hello Mom?
I'm not sure but I think I have been sentenced to thug life

Hello Dad?
Did you not have the words to warn me of this much fear?
My phone is dying

My text messages will be used against me in a court of law
My attorney will be appointed to me by a state
That had a slave code before it was a state

No I don't understand the rights you have given to me
No I don't understand why I must remain silent

How to Build a Prison
for Philadelphia, USA

1.

Always hated that building and never knew why
The one right before the on ramp for 95
Cross-corner from the statue of Tamanend
Riding the world-turtle stretching out his hand

*William Penn got along with Indian That's why it's not Fort Philly
That's why there's no wall
But there's this building*

Five stories tall all boarded-up windows and blackened red brick A corner where Philadelphia starts to unfold
A block where the City of Brotherly Love sold slaves

2.

MOVE³: 1 city, 2 stories

*They lived like animals
They ate garbage
They shot from the bunker*

*They wore dread locks
They grew organic fruit
There were no guns in the house*

Rebroadcast on Chanel 10
The bomb the blaze the heat
That which we all agree MOVE: one neighborhood, 2 survivors

3.

Rebroadcast on Chanel 10
Every year the police helicopter releases the bomb like New Year's Day releases Mummers on Broad Street

Follow it like City Hall Scandal
Follow it like Eagles-Cowboys game Follow it like 4th quarter Hail Mary going... going... going...

4.

The security guard locks doors like forgotten trauma
I'm in my office late grading papers that analyze poems that protest against policy
I'm in my office marking in red when students misspell "Sanchez"

The security stops to remind me Every Liberal is a Conservative that hasn't been mugged yet He was a cop before I was born

back when Philly was a Police Force Crack a head through a windshield in order to protect Light a block on fire to serve

5.

Order a cheesesteak
in South Philly
Notice the sign
ORDER IN ENGLISH ONLY

Notice a T-shirt
for sale HELP
PUT MUMIA SIX FEET
CLOSER TO HELL

Go across the street
Notice the sign
OWNER DOES NOT ACCEPT
BILLS COVERED IN BLOOD

6.

My students ask me if I Will take a haunted tour
Of historic Eastern State Penitentiary
I tell them As a Black man

*I try to never set foot in a prison
I tell them
I live in Philadelphia
I already have bars on my door*

night song (summer)

and the skyscrapers have overtaken the stars and the bars are open half price and half ready to close and the people are putting on one more layer of clothes though the air hasn't dropped a degree and the door

is looking for the key and the cars outside are blasting news instead of bumping base and everyone's wearing the verdict on their face and no one is dancing and no one's going to bed and the man's walking

free and young brother's still dead and the blinds are closed and the latch

is locked and the room is dark and there's the sound of my watch

Music Appreciation

I. Old School R&B

They say before Jordan Davis was shot and killed by a white man who went home claimed self defense and called for a pizza

Jordan spent his Monday nights
outside Atlanta
at the discount roller rink

$1 per slice $1 to skate
one in front and one behind bounce left bounce right

His mother right there watching her son glide on through the world turning beneath his feet

II. Gangsta Rap

They say when Michael Dunn fired nine times
into the car killing Jordan Davis Dunn saw a gun.
But Dunn saw the music

the anger in the music

saw it leak into the pavement make the doors shake
then every widow in the neighborhood started to break cops came out the woodwork beat everyone resisting arrest

arrested everyone else they could find used hair-triggers and tech nines billy clubs and cat-o-nines

and the blood of the community was washed with a city hose and Dunn the felt a pulsing in his nose a burning on his temples

his eyes started to ache
and the Monster of America climbed out from an earthquake black bodies in its claws

black bodies in its jaws
and though the beast gave Dunn only a wink in its wake

that white man drew his gun and he just shot away.

just shot away

III. Classic Rock

They say Merry Clayton lost the baby
after recording the Rolling Stones song

They needed a different sound a sound like America

but Merry Clayton gave them a sound that broke it's own barrier folded time into space until the United States became a black hole

a hologram on it's own horizon
a singularity

belting out
a sound beyond the universe

we conceive
so we only believe we hear a crack in Merry Clayton's voice a vacuum in the beat

a darkness so tight there's space

for neither mother nor child to cry

How to Dance During a Riot
for Michael Brown & Ferguson
for President Obama in Martha's Vineyard

Get up
Get on up
Get your hands up

Show 'em up
Put 'em up
Put your hands up

Shake it to the south
To the east
To the west

Put 'em up Complyin'
Not resisting arrest

Shout demands
To the DJ
James Brown

Motown
Say it loud
Shoot 'em fo he run now

Move the crowd
Do what I say now
Left foot stomp!

Right foot stomp!
Ain't nothing going on
But a peaceful protest

Ain't nothing going on
But civil unrest
Move it

Like a pusher
A pedestrian
A president

Shake it like a stun grenade
Going off in a residence
Shake it like a shake down

Lock up in the Fed Bounce like a bullet
Off of grandma's head

Get down
Like you doing
What the officer said

Just get back up Before they think you're dead
Get your hands up

Get your hands up
Get your hands up
Get 'em up

What a Demon Looks Like in Ferguson, Missouri⁴

A breathing contradiction. The backside of a compromise. The impenitent thief on the dogwood cross. The shadow of wolf mix thought long extinct. A dog at the Crossroads. A witchdoctor in Mall clothes, the Mall forced closed due to gang activity. No gangs ever found. A hellhound. A cannibal heading off to college. A nightmare hanging with you through the August heat. An incubus of un-abolished lust:
jay-walking with such swagger he could kill a thousand ladies just by making them remember his image at night, imagine his taste, move their fingers below their waist and slowly trace an O.
Patchwork of masculinity, sewn together from unwanted corpses like an American quilt. A hognose trying to be a rattlesnake. A trickster. A changeling sounding like your child
- so much like your child - that you can't understand. Six shots? Four to the head? One veered near the heart. It must have been some wormwood angel falling to land, a xenomorph in the street turning into sand, anything other than a young man. He couldn't have looked like my brother. Must be some Other: like one of Zeus' hundred-armed monsters, holding up all one hundred hands.

Kids will be ?⁵

On November 22nd 2014 a Cleveland Police Officer shot 12 year old Tami Rice

this was a justified shooting

learn from this incident

Your children should not be allowed

throughout the neighborhood

guns have no warning guns do have your child

These guns are very real

Warn them

The Police may get called to respond

it is important to know how officers are trained to respond

the Police will respond as a gun and sirens and come to a screeching halt

The police will respond lights where your child is

help your child respond appropriately Do not run away They need no longer have gun in hands They need to comply with officers instructions to lie down on the ground

the police is essential Police is a gun I am explaining a scenario that will happen in our area

again kids will be war in the common grounds Share this with your children tell this story

we will keep our community safe

This is How You Choke ‘em
after Junot Diaz’s “Alma.”

You, Officer Pantaleo, have a suspect named Eric with a big neck big broad Black shoulders that seem to shade the whole block.
Shoulders that could hold up half of Staten Island.
Shoulders that never bothered you until now.
Even when he’s yelling his voice is deep, heavy Like the Black guy in the first ten minutes of a 1980s horror flick.

Eric is a regular, one of those “broken window” Ta-Nehisi Coates-reading motherfuckers without whom you’d might not make your monthly quota.
Probably grew up on this very corner watching the garbage barges stop coming just to start up again.
Eric says he was breaking up a fight, and the fights he breaks up are between PoCs cause “cops only help out white people” - we can dredge up some old story about him selling loosies.
He turns his back on you.
Maybe you’re wearing that I-just-got-out-of-two-prior-accusations-of-misconduct-and-all-i-have-is-this-lousy-t-shirt look on your face.
The past couple of weeks it’s been on-and-off heat wave. Eric is wearing a shirt like a giant colored Kleenex and when the wind blows it bends around his girth.
You peep around, make eye contact with the other officers.
You know exactly what they’re thinking.
Since you arrived, you’ve been thinking the same thing, too.

Eric’s hands leave his sides, your arm reaches for his neck.
Eric starts to lose his balance, you ride him to the street.
He starts with his “I can’t breathe” but he can still talk so you just hold him tighter.
Hold his weight against yours.
Hold till all your boys can hold a piece That’s it.
Like a tie clip.
Like a riot shield.
Hold it. Hold. Hold. Hold.

Halloween Poem (2014)

Don't listen to that mess. Don't Devil that shame.
That vaccine is just running game. All hoodwink hocus pocus All hoodoo bambooze. Ain't no such thing as the zombie flu.
Oh, but you saw it live on the news: one minute the weatherman's talking about blue sky followed by clouds. Then he starts coughing with water in his eyes.
Next thing you know he's nibbling the anchor's elbow.
Shoot, Negro, have you seen that anchor? I'd nibble her elbow, her ear lobe, lick her inner thigh. This flu's an excuse.

Here's some news, this zombie flu thing is media-produced.
The real is just the real flu with a sharper fever and more drool but after a little sleep you feel just fine. Then you start to wine cause there's no food around. Hell, that's just your immune system going to town.
That's what naturally goes down. But these media empires and drug companies can't sell nature. They sell panic instead. Work real hard to get into our heads. Get our brains to swell and our blood to thicken, and get us thinking humans taste like chicken. Truth is, we taste like duck: chewy and fatty with clumps that get stuck in the bottom of your esophagus. You never think of this?

Most people don't. Most people won't. But would you eat something apartment caged? Starved metro-thin and toxin-glazed?
Simmering in madness and fear and chagrin?
Prime human being? Shoot, Negro, ain't no such thing.

night song (fall)

The city's starting to trade in its haze for clearer days and bluer nights and party-hitters don knit armor and short skirts grow tights

as fashionable women work smarter at the art of exposing the body and flesh-hungry men relearn

how to repress and starve.

And all the bars roll-up their awnings and serve extra alcohol to keep warm.

And all the stoop councils

adjourn early and all the anger that last season swarmed over a

a single sizzling comment now comes to a blustery stop. And even the cops can't fathom taking out their hands to grab a random brother and throw him to the ground feel around his waist his thighs

his ass and his groin tear open his pockets watch

whatever coin fall out figure out they have the wrong one

kick him in the stomach and tell him "Move along, son."

The Talk

When two people love each other or think they love each other or think they see love in someone else they will try to be alone together which is better then being alone
by yourself unless you loan your self out to others in which you might not get your self back so

when you find someone of interest show interest in getting closer while cautious not to come off too strong or too easy so give them space keep your eyes down in fact just cross to the other side the street people may see you as threat or suspect and when they see you as a suspect keep your eyes down put your hands up say yes sir and no sir and I'm going to reach into my pocket and take out my I.D. sir and no sir I do not have a weapon cause you are a weapon your mind and body and breath are a weapon

and like any weapon you are a piece of art and like any art they'll want to lock you up behind glass and look at you and never ever touch you and all you want to be all we all want to be is touched so when you find someone you want to touch and who'll want to touch you back make sure you hear words like honey and sweetie and pumpkin pie and beau but not so much that you don't hear them from anyone special and not so much that you don't believe them

when heard and not so much that they turn into words like jezebel and black bastard and fucking faggot and goddamn
dyke because these words will come at night when you are walking alone on the street grab at your breath take you from your body and rip away your mind and you are mine my child or worse still when you find someone willing to have a child with you and with you alone you will know the cacophony of a clock ticking past curfew you will know the cold sweat of an insomnia sheet you will know the world is your partner limbs over yours lips to your ear

saying I will be here
tomorrow and tomorrow I will kill everyone you love.

“post-racial” as Samuel L. Jackson

You are an usher at MLK’s funeral.
You are in a theatre in Chattanooga, Tennessee watching films edited for Black content.
You never see Sidney Poitier slap Yvonne De Carlo in Band of Angels.

You are a student at Morehouse
 during a protest taking hostage the Board of Trustees
You are suspended for some time.

You die in the first fifteen minutes.
You die in the second scene.
You survive but the brother behind you gets his head blown off.
You have bits of brain in your afro for the rest of the film.

You are eaten by a velociraptor.
You are eaten by a shark.
You are eaten by the smoke of Gator’s crack pipe.

 Inhale once.
You’re losing Isaiah.
 Inhale twice.
You’re showing Hallie how to hold it.
 Inhale a third time
You’re Cannes Film Festival’s Best Supporting Actor
 Nobody has won the award since.

You are trying to get a white reporter to say “nigger.”
 He’s got a great question about the “n-word”
 but doesn’t feel comfortable with “nigger.”
You dare him to say it.
You double dare him motherfucker.

 Cause they think
You look like Lawrence Fishburne
 Cause they call
You Mr. Glass.
 Cause
You are Jedi High Council Agent of S.H.E.I.L.D.
 The highest grossing actor of all time

You die at the end of the movie watching Robert Foster make-out with Pam Grier.

You are the tyranny of evil men.

Every time you write about Marissa Alexander

you end up on vacation.

Every time you write about Marissa Alexander, you start at the same place: Marissa Alexander's packing her clothes. Rico Gray comes in, gets in her face.
I'm going to kill you, bitch! he screams through the bathroom door.
You're on vacation.

You're on vacation with your family.
You're nine or ten or twelve-years-old staring at the same red carpet the same red walls Same air-conditioner chilling in the window humming through it all.
Your father stands tall announcing, Today, you're going to shoot a gun.

You're on vacation.

Marissa Alexander is able to get to the garage, but automatic door won't engage.
Rico Gray is flying though rage. I'm going to kill you, bitch! The door won't open.
Marissa Alexander goes to the glove box and grabs her gun.

You're at the gun range.

You're at the gun range and you're holding a .38 police special – the weight of it holds your whole body down.
It's the lightest gun you can find.
White man comes up from behind puts his hands over yours saying Let me help you, son.

Daughter.
Marissa Alexander just had a daughter.
Premie. 8 months.
She aims for the wall.

The White man who's not your father at all says Let me help you, son and wraps his hands around yours so that it's his hands and the gun and your hands are no more. You have White-man hands holding a .38 special flat nose enclosed base.
Hold it steady hold it straight.
Shoot for the black face.

The tin target
the smiling face:
two dots and a curve
scorched dark from a thousand sparks
a thousand shots
a thousand vacationers that come and go face still smiling though still saying *C'mon brother, come take a shot I dare you. I double dog dare you.

Come point your gun and have a nice day.*

Rico Gray
says If I can't have you, no one will flies into rage and threatens to kill has five baby-mamas and beat every last one.
Marissa Alexander cocks the gun.

You pull the trigger.

Marissa shoots the wall and Rico leaves.
Cops show up, surround the house with ease.
- Come out, Ms. Alexander, and get on your knees.
- Okay, I'm unarmed. Don't shoot, please.

This poem would like to start with “Thank you.”

This poem appreciates your patience and acceptance even though at this point you have no idea what this poem is about.

This poem would like to offer you the occasional word count for your convenience: forty-five and counting and you’re still here. (Thank you.)

This poem wants to shake your hand wants to pat you on the shoulder is resisting the urge to offer a full embrace just incase you’re not comfortable with that.

This poem does not want to get too personal.
Doesn’t want to unravel you like thread off your jacket, wants to ask “Hey where’d you get that jacket?” not “Why you always dress so clean?” or “What do mean America?
Where are you really from?” and no “C’mon, you have to be mixed.” No this poem does not want to do this.

This poem wants to be a happy poem offer you a smile hoping you’ll offer a smile back. (if not, that’s fine) Why attack you with words?
- one hundred seventy one and counting - Still having fun?
Okay

this poem won’t even mention security

like the guards in front of libraries that need to see your i.d. or a new friend that hears you speak and decides your hometown must be white or the white boy that dresses like a flyboy and says to your face i’m trying to look more jive or the five officers looking for a suspicious character and need to see your i.d. or the roommates when something breaks and you’re the one always left holding the broom or the elevator in the conference hall where people pause even though come in, there’s plenty of room or the cops that can’t believe you teach here and need to see your i.d. in order to keep the neighborhood safe and just to be safe

this poem won't even mention sex so please dismiss any reference to strangers encroaching in the dancehall cause you're moving and smiling and alone and so tall and so strange so exotic and something to kiss to caress to feel to grind and play for a night or a song then push you away.

This poem will say nothing of any fetishes or obsessions or psychic scars left by microaggressions you may still carry like that time you went to visit your fair-hair friend in a straight comb town and barely preteens you two found some random yard sale and while thumbing through books and records and whatever was there some white-shadow woman noticed your nappy black hair and leaned in behind you close to your ear whispering

"Need a basketball?"

This poem won't mention that at all.

no

this poem wants to convey silence or violence

silence being the most violent word this poem knows.

this poem will now go.

night song (winter)

No college kids cracking beer bottles in the church courtyard

while spirits look down shaking their heads No ambulance cutting the ambience of the streetlamps turning brownstones into red No sax on the corner breathing jazz for a quarter waiting for cops to come drum him away

No bus stop cry No siren lullaby
No skyscraper moon or celestial holes or prayer pajamas I'm sleeping in my clothes with my shoes

on the covers cause there's no you in this bed Even sunrise crows have stopped carrying departed souls only beaks full of flesh of the dead

Rhetoric⁶

*The difference between poetry and rhetoric is being ready to kill yourself
instead of your children.
-Audre Lorde "Power"*

DON: I want to talk to you

ANN: Now that the Ferguson grand jury documents have been made public

BILL: The looters and arsonists sent a strong message

FOX: And so

Let's talk about race. Let's talk about black-on-black violence.

ANN: Someone's got to say it

RUDY: 93% of blacks

BILL: 99.9 percent of all police

FOX: Americans, 53 percent

ANN: a minimum of 3.3 percent

DON: everybody talking about race,

FOX: just throwing flames on a fire. it's just inappropriate.

RUDY: very disappointing

BILL: I know many African-Americans who are appalled

DON: I didn't want to discuss at length crime in the African-American community or how to fix other ills that seem to be plaguing the community

ANN: Improving their "economic status" doesn't seem to help.

DON: Because black people, if you really want to fix the problem, here's just five things that you should think about doing number five. Pull up your pants.

The one with the really low pants is the submissive one.

FOX:, it's a black man in a nice suit selling loosies or whatever they're called

DON: Number four now is the n-word

ANN: neighborhoods[?]

BILL: The New York Times [?]

FOX: NYPD [?]

ANN: MSNBC [?]

DON: nigger.

FOX: or whatever they're called

DON: Now number three. Start small by not dropping trash, littering in your own communities.

RUDY: It is the reason for the heavy police presence in the black community.

DON: Number two, finish school.
Stop telling kids they're acting white because they speak proper English.

RUDY: I would like to see attention paid to that that you are paying to this and the solutions to that.

DON: And number one, and probably the most important, just because you can have a baby, it doesn't mean you should.

BILL: There are currently more than 43 million blacks living in the U.S.A.

ANN: That's more black people being murdered,

FOX: Because we cannot ignore that race plays a role in how we police in America.

RUDY: . I think we do a pretty good job. Not a perfect job. But the reality is--

FOX: . If Eric Garner were a 300-plus-pound white man resisting arrest the police would have treated him differently.

DON: So, please, black folks, as I said if this doesn't apply to you,

ANN: a cop in Chicago fatally shot an unarmed civilian, LaTanya Haggerty, a 26-year-old computer programmer thought LaTanya had a gun -- but that turned out to be a cellphone.

DON: Pay attention to and think about what has been presented in recent history as acceptable behavior.

ANN: four New York City police officers shot an unarmed Amadou Diallo, after he pulled out what looked like a gun. It turned out to be a wallet.

DON: I'm not talking to you.

ANN: Michael Brown gunned down like a dog in the street by Officer Darren Wilson.

BILL: The grand jury in Missouri decided against indicting

FOX: two grand juries

DON: OK. So You can love what I said or you can hate it.

FOX: it's clear that we police people differently in America based on their economics and ethnicity.

BILL: That should be clear to everyone.

DON: You can love what I said or you can hate it.

FOX: he was saying "I can't breathe, I can't breathe," and not attended to

BILL: And Once you see crimes being committed in any situation, you must walk away or you become part of the violent mob

DON: So we're going to take a break from the headlines

BILL: the lynch mob

DON: black folks, as I said this doesn't apply to you, And it's not going to.

FOX: Your
humanity was forgotten

DON: So, black folks
I'm not talking to you.

FOX: because black life worth less

RUDY: insignificant.

DON: You can love what I said or you can hate it.

ANN: more black people being murdered

DON: Matters not to me.

How to be Black in an Airport with your Indian Wife

First I button up my professor vest – my why-yes-I-am-an-African-American-Professor-vest - even though I'm not a full professor. Technically I teach part time.
Later, in line, I unbutton my vest, place my belt in the scanner (so now my pants are sagging), and all my paper and pens (now I can't read or write) and take a deep breath because this is where I worry much more about my wife.

See, this ain't a well-lit café or high-end retail store.
This ain't a cool summer breeze on white concrete.
My wife's not trying to keep from stomping her feet fearing an open-air argument with a Black man is an open call for cops to come throw me to the ground, cuff my throat, grind the sidewalk into my ear – all of which hasn't actually happened yet but if it did

I bet I'd win the argument. You know, on technicality.
What was I talking about it? Security!

The TSA rechecks my wife's I.D.
asks her to remove her sari
(It' a Ralph Lauren trench coat) and her hijab (She's Hindu. It's a Marc Jacob scarf) and then scoff at her saying every story of an aggressive Anglo will have to go through the scanner
and your Hart-Celler must be placed in the tray.

Then we go through the x-ray, an extra gauntlet of white gloves - their gentle smack and pull - pull ourselves together to get to the gate change then the gate change then told to wait through a diaspora of departures and double consciousness until we are corralled into the plane squeezed into an exhausted runway where with this traffic ain't nobody going nowhere 'round here.

Where was I going with this?
Oh yes. I wanted to say I'm sorry,

Baby, this was suppose to be our revolution love song, but the only real turbulence we face is in the air with everybody else. The plane shakes me awake, your grip tightens around my hand.
I turn to you and say (Nina, please understand I am not three fifths of an economy class
your Punjabi needs not to be patted-down.
Those are concerns for the ground with the Dotbusters and killer cops
the racism-doubters and the follow-me shops.
Here we are 33A and 33B.
Fly or fall we are free.
And you can trust me Baby,
because I'm your husband, I love you,

and I'm a professor.)

How to Light Your Own Poem on Fire

Eric's smoking a cigarette as the protest marches by.

Tanisha drops her groceries on the concrete.

The mounted television replays Rodney while the speakers blast Marvin What's Going On?

Trayvon's looking at the candy.

Latasha's in the freezer for O.J.

Running through the aisles

John and Tamir play with their toy guns.

The cashier ask Amadou how he'd like to pay.

On the way out Emmett offers me a wink.

This is our world

burning to no conclusion

in a smolder no word can blow out.

Instructions to the Child I Won't Have

Step 1:

When gutting the fish
Slip the knife into the head
From the back of the throat

The eyes don't blink so Neither should you. Instead Think about your great –

Grandfather coming back From the war. He never Talked about cutting his

Comrades or dulling under Jim Crow. He would just come Home silently and gut fish.

Step 2:

When cooking the fish Grill in a pan mixed
With peppers or fry

On a bed of onions until smoke
Becomes a cloud of unwanted Kisses and the sizzle

Becomes a noose.
Remember your grandmother
No protest

Song can save you.
Remember you still have The knife.

Step 3:
When devouring the fish
Do not dine like your Father. Sip wine

Across an Atlantic
Of friends. Cherish the corner
Kisses and mixed table

Blessings. Love the Kaleidoscope of faces
And know that one of them

Will betray you
While the rest sit back And watch.

¹ Between 2012 and 2014, three young men have died in a similar manner: shot while handcuffed in the back of police car. Although no weapon was found during the initial pat-down, all three deaths have been ruled as suicides.

² “Her name was Renisha McBride. She is not just a girl who was murdered on a porch.” –Tina Vásquez.

³ The MOVE stand-off/bombing, May 13, 1985

⁴ “...it looks like a demon, that's how angry he looked.”
Officer Darren Wilson, in his testimony to the Grand Jury on his killing of Michael Brown.

⁵ Erasure from City of Fenton Facebook post “Kids will be Kids” December 4, 2014 (removed the same day)
www.cbsnews.com

⁶ Found text from rush transcripts:
Ann Coulter
Megyn Kelly (FOX)
Don Lemon
Judy Miler (FOX)
Rudy Giuliani
& Bill O'Reilly